KEEP TEENS SAFE WHEN USING TECHNOLOGY

Hancock County parents of teenagers are invited to attend a program covering safe relationships in the technology world of the internet and cell phones. Lifeline Youth & Family Services, Inc., with financial support from Community Partners for Child Safety (CPCS), will host "Socially Safe Teens" sessions that will include media presentations and small group breakouts.

Rich Troyer, Lifeline's Center for Responsible Thinking (CRT) Director, stated, "Parents need to know how to keep children safe, who are using this technology, and still maintain positive relationships within the family. We want parents to learn ways to positively respond to today's high-tech culture by thinking safety first."

Thanks to CPCS funding, the sessions are free. The first parent night is scheduled for Tuesday evening, November 3, 2009 at 7:00pm. It will be held at Maxwell Middle School in Maxwell, Indiana. Pre-registration is not required.
